SHORT MEDICAL TALKS.

Dr. Hodges Explains How the Blood Circulates

and the Cause of Heart Disease.

The first in the course of seven medical talks, which are to be given before the members of the Y. M. C. A., was delivered last night, in the lecture-room of the association, by Dr. E. F.

Hodges. There were over one hundred members present. The doctor's remarks were confined to the circulation of the blood, and were made clear by practical illustrations. The heart of an ox was dissected and all its parts fully explained. With the aid of pumps and rubber tubes, the manner of the expulsion of blood from the heart and its return was made very plain.

In speaking of the causes of many of the phenomena of heart disease he said the valves were so arranged as to allow the circulation of the blood only in one way. It is forced through these valves and is allowed no return by reason of their being defective, and when diseased, as in consequence of rheumatism, cause imperfect circulation of the blood and return currents, thus

THE ANNUAL HOME FEAST

Thanksgiving with All Its Essentials of Good Living and Happiness.

Dealers Busy in Meeting the Demands for

Turkeys and Other Luxuries of the Season

—How the Day Will Be Observed.

Thanksgiving dealings monopolized the at- tention of grocers, yesterday, those to whom the richer trade goes and those whose supplies are sent out to any one who has the money to pay for them alike enjoying the extra demand caused by the annual feast. Baskets, packages, bundles and hampers of goods, but none without the essential turkey, were piled up in many places waiting delivery, while to every minute was added some other basket, package, bundle or hamper. All were neatly marked or num- bered, and the clerk or porter would only wait long enough to see that whatever it was reached the spot to insure correctness on the part of the drivers. It was in the midst of such bustle as this that the lady taking out her memorandum called the attention of a clerk and said: "I want first, nice baskets."

"What use will the lady make of these bas- kets?" she asked.

"The reporter asked the proprietor of the store as the clerk went to fill the order. "With a turkey, celery and cranberries. The tempting establishment will be sent to the employees of her hus- band's store. We are filling many orders of that kind. So is every other grocer. Manu- facturers by largely in that way for their workmen. Many limit the purchase to a turkey, but others add cranberries, while some complete the three essentials for a Thanksgiv- ing dinner by adding celery. No Thanksgiving dinner can be given without turkey, cranberries and celery. There are employees, too, who have oysters to add further richness to their feasts. Occasionally a very liberal purchaser, who wishes to make the annual dinner of those who have worked for him faithfully as luxurious as possible, buy confections, fruits and nuts. That gives a feast of elaborate details, but whether it is the turkey alone or the turkey with all the fixings, the act of giving goes a great way in making Thanksgiv- ing one of general happiness."

"That is the sentiment; now for the cost," was suggested.

"Oh, it is impossible to tell anything about that. We cannot even approximate it for the custom of the well-to-do in sharing with those who for the sake of economy would deny them- selves Thanksgiving luxuries if they had to buy them, is increasing. This year it costs a little more to put up a Thanksgiving basket. Turkey is higher, a cent or a cent and a half more to England. It was poor corn crop in 1887 that causes this advance in price. Cranberries are good and at about the same price they commanded last season. There is no change in celery except that it is a trifle dearer. Raisers are getting stalks almost to immaculate whiteness, and the winter they are the more crisp, hence the more delicious. We do not see any drawing in of pure strings. Our cus- tomers generally are not compelled to economize, but I hear of nothing in the trade from other grocers to lead us to think that there is not as much money spent this year as last in the way of preparing for the feasts of to-mor- row."

While the grocer looks at Thanksgiving in the matter of dollars and cents, the sentimental and the religious would throw in history and veneration to balance the practical. The former allows himself to speculate on why the turkey is the emblem of the day. He knows the bird in that character has come down through the generations from 1621, when the first harvest was gathered by the Plymouth colonists. It was time for Thanksgiv- ing, and in order to give the general feast a special flavor, Governor Bradford sent four men out gunning for wild turkeys. This was on Oct. 3, 1621, and the four men secured a number of the birds. But Thanksgiving has a more remote origin than among the religious. They place it at the old Hebrew feast of Taber- nacles, but the day occasionally appeared in the European calendar along in the sixteenth cen- tury, and perhaps earlier. The first anniversary of the delivery of Leyden, Holland, was ob- served by a thanksgiving, Oct. 3, 1575. In 1608 the Pilgrim Church, exiled from Holland, went to England, and twelve years later set off the Mayflower colony to New England. The recom- mendation of a day's public thanksgiving was mainly confined to New England until after the war. Since 1865 the President of the United States has annually issued a proclamation of thanksgiving, which is generally observed, but to a very limited extent in the South; but the custom observed there before the war, as in 1858 thanksgiving proclamations were made by the Governors of eight of the Southern States. For the first time the Catholics will observe the feast this year as a religious feast. Several weeks ago Cardinal Gibbons, of Bal- timore, issued an encyclical letter to the bishops of this country endorsing the action of the Presi- dent and Governors in setting aside a special day for thanksgiving.

A Beautiful Custom.

Yesterday was a day of jubilee in the public schools. In the afternoon the routine of study was abandoned and exercises of various kinds took place. The day before Thanksgiving, for the past few years, has been set aside as a time for pleasure, and it has been given the name of Autumn Festival. The pupils are entertained by singing, by recitations from different mem- bers of the class, and in some instances the teachers read some story or poem. A great many of the pupils have decided talent for elocution and their pieces are given with an intelligence and emphasis often lacking in professional trained young people. In a few instances the children seem nervous, but for the most part they are entirely composed, and they take great pride in learning their selections and rarely have to be assisted or prompted. Each teacher is obliged to understand music sufficiently well to teach the rudiments and lead the songs. Fre- quently all can listen instead of sing, and they are through the first few measures and can carry it along without any help. Decorations appropriate to the season were seen in nearly every room, and other embellishments were added simply for beauty. There were strings of popcorn, strings of cranberries, strings of buck- eye, strings of two of these and sometimes of all three, fastened over the black-boards and windows. Popcorn not popped, in bunches, with ears of red, yellow and white, was hung up by the bush. Red and white onions, yellow pumpkins, green cabbages, apples of every color and kind, potatoes and numerous knick- knacks of every description added their color to the whole. In one room the children had a light tissue paper and cut it in fancy patterns and by- and-by it to the windows like ash curtains, where it hung with a decidedly lacy effect—pink, blue, but the most beautiful was a garland of life and freshness, and flags were draped here and there, in profusion.

The chief interest at this time centers in the quantity of articles brought by the children for those who are less fortunate than they. It is understood that each child in the schools shall bring on that day some vegetable, some piece of wearing apparel or a few cents. Even one potato, an apple or a cent is just as welcome as a larger amount. By the time each child has contributed the amount is astonishing. Bunches of potatoes and bunches of apples are thus collected, and any quantity of other vegetables. Sometimes a turkey will be brought, though this is not a common occur- rence. The clothing piled up on a bench fills it to repletion, and the money amounts to many dollars. If there are any families in the schools that need care they are the first supplied. After that the corps of the Grand Army have every- thing edible for distribution to those under their charge. On Friday all the clothing is carried to Superintendent Jones's room, and it is there looked over and appraised. The work of this is found useful for the children of the free kindergarten. The money is used where it will do the most good, and this is generally for the purchase of shoes. Many parents can- keep their children clothed, but find it difficult to buy shoes, and these are known to the teach- er, and she sees that their wants are supplied. The children take great interest in all this work, and it teaches them the pleasure of giv- ing, and helps them to a better manhood and womanhood. All the lessons taught are not out of books, and these holiday exercises are a judicious interruption. A private library has been started in one of the schools. It is because last year they have already thirty-three volumes, wisely lected by the teachers. Voluntary contributions are made by the pupils. The teachers recom- mend a little self-denial, and the money has earned the children are proud to pay into the treasury. The books are for reference and reading. Altogether the day was a profitable one, and a feast will take place in many a home to-day. As one of the mottoes elaborately printed on the black-board expressed it, "Hur- rah for Thanksgiving!"

Exercises at the Kindergarten.

Yesterday morning the children of the free kindergarten schools were given a Thanksgiv- ing lunch at the several buildings used by the schools, consisting of turkey, celery, sauce, fruits and rolls. The lunch was furnished by the society at Nos. 2, 3, 5 and 6, while that at No. 1 was spread by the members of the Help- ing Hand Society. The parents of the children attending the school furnished the lunch at No. 4. The rooms were tastefully decorated with flowers, cereals and vegetables.

A feature of the exercises was the story of the Pilgrim Fathers, told and illustrated with material used in the kindergarten. The schools, which opened in September with an attendance of 200 pupils, have steadily increased until there are over 400. Through the energy of the Chil- dren's Aid and Free Kindergarten societies and management of the superintendent, Mrs. E. A. Baker, the schools are in good working order. The entire force of teachers amounts to twenty-two. From the present prospect of increase in number another kindergarten will have to be purchased to accommodate the pupils. Visitors are always welcome and are earnestly invited to look over the work.

Thanksgiving at the Hotels.

The carmine crested and vermilion wattled turkey which recent ornithological writers de- clare should have been our national bird, in- stead of the bald-headed and carion-eating eagle, will figure largely at the city hotels. At the Bates House he will be sur- rounded by blue-points, green turbot, pompano and stewed terrapin, with Lucullus punch, roast pheasant, haunch of black-tailed deer, green peas and asparagus, and will be followed by royal diplomatic pudding, Neapoli- tan cream and jelly confections, topped off with Roquefort and Stilton cheese. At the New Denison he will be stuffed with chestnuts, flanked with oysters and turbot, shrimps, rice and Kennebec salmon, chicken and sweetbreads, quail and French peas, Maraschino punch, Mallard duck and cream, lettuce and lobster mayonnaise, English plum-pudding and Sazerette cream. The other hotels will spread similar tempting and appetizing arrays, and altogether the wayfarer man who happens to eat his Thanksgiving dinner in an Indianapolis hotel, will have no oc- casion to tighten up his waistband after he has completed the courses prepared for his dis- cussion.

Thanksgiving Weddings.

Thanksgiving day is one preferred for weddings by many and, therefore, the feast of the season and the feast of marriage will be observed as usual by happy couples beginning matrimonial life. Licenses were issued yesterday to Will O. Shelby and Carrie E. Shanberger, Albert R. Moore and Cornelia A. Sutherland, Charles H. Koenen and Indiana Hedrick, Samuel A. Whit- more and Julia Hedrick, Edw. E. Trause and Mary E. Poulter, Walter A. Marley and Sarah E. Sherman, John William Fritch and Mary A. Lindell, Edward A. Shomberg and Ida Thomp- son, Joseph A. Smith and Clara Simpson, Charles P. Miller and Laura M. Emery, John M. Board and Luella Marsh, Philip Kile and Katie Kallau, Nicholas H. Long and Laura E. Seely, William Wallace, Gen. Thomas H. Nelson, Zelen and Anna Reige, John H. Unversatt and Edna P. Chase.

At the Theaters.

Vernona Jarbeau, always attractive and bright, will begin her engagement at the Grand with a Thanksgiving matinee this afternoon, when her entertaining musical comedy "Star- light" will be given. The music and specialties are all new this season, and Miss Jarbeau has an unusually strong company of singers and comedians. She is a host in herself.

Imra Kiraly's gorgeous spectacular production of "Maxim" will be seen for the first time here at the matinee at English's this afternoon, and will be repeated to-night and the rest of the week. It is a new and original production, and a special scenery used in it, and it is full of new and brilliant features, including three grand ballets and European specialties. There is a grand finale and a grand finale.

Frank Frayne will be seen in "Si Slocum" at both performances at the Park to-day, and during the rest of the week his new play, "Ken- tucky Bill," will be given.

The advance sale of seats will commence at the store of D. H. Baldwin & Co. this morning, for the concert that is to take place at Tomlin- son Hall on the 5th of December.

The Y. M. C. A. Spread.

At the Y. M. C. A. building a Thanksgiving dinner and entertainment will be given for young men away from home, for which extensive preparations have been made, and to which every one coming under the above designation is cordially invited. The dinner will be served in the hall on the third floor of the building from 2 to 4 p. m., and the menu is an attractive one. From 4 until 6 p. m. a musical and literary entertain- ment will be given in the hall on the second floor, including addresses by Mayor Denny and Secretary Douglass and recitations, song and instrumen- tal numbers by others. From 8 to 9 p. m. an exhibition will be given in the gymnasium, in- cluding the best of the amateur athletes of the association, and the whole programme is one that reflects credit on the association, and will prove very entertaining to visitors.

Feeding the Children.

The children who are not provided for at home are likely to be well cared for here to-day. The ladies in charge of the Home of the Friendless took in $225 at the Model yesterday, those of the Indianapolis Orphan Home at the Wilson received about $400, and the committee of the Colored Or- phans' Home gathered $75 at Talbot's willowware store, and contributions of money, clothing and groceries are still coming in. Invitations for boys have been received for newboys from 172 North Delaware street and from Messrs. Ketcham, Bond, Spalding, Taylor, Evans, Ford, and others. Blankets and other articles are being sent to the homes of these entertainers have been made. A dinner will also be given them at the Home on Delaware street.

Services and Entertainments.

The West Indianapolis M. E. Sunday-school will give an entertainment this evening at the church named.

The Rock Creek and Meridian-street congrega- tions will hold union services at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the first-named church. The Rev. Dr. Cleveland will preach.

The Thanksgiving service at the Central Christian Church, to-day, will consist of appro- priate music and a sermon by the pastor, Dr. R. Lucas. His subject will be, "Am Glad." A collection for the poor will be taken at the close of the service.

The Memorial Presbyterian Church will have services at 10:30 this morning. Blackford and California-street churches will unite at the former for services at the same hour, as will Cen- tral and Second and Seventh Methodist Churches at the Central-avenue. At the latter church Dr. Ford will preach the sermon.

Christ Church Club.

The young people of Christ P. E. Church have organized a club, to be known as the Christ Church Club until some better name can be given. Its object is good work and sociability.

The following officers have been elected: President—Miss Eliza G. Browning.

Vice-presidents—Miss Kate Landis, Miss Jen- nie Cobb.

Secretary—Mr. Arthur Hammond.

Treasurer—Mr. John J. Landis.

Another meeting will be held next Monday night, when a larger attendance is expected.

The Seventy-Second Anniversary.

The programme of exercises issued by Superintendent LaFollette, of the department of public instruction, for the use of the State schools on the occasion of the celebration of the seventy-second anniversary of the admission of Indiana into the Union has been issued, and is a very complete and interesting one. It contains a brief history of the State and several patriotic recitations and songs, and enough copies have been issued to supply every teacher in the State.

Battle of Atlanta.

Open from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. Visited by thousands and thousands. Nothing but praise from every one.

COMMANDERY NO. 3, Knights Father Matthew, will give a grand concert and supper to-night at their hall, corner Georgia and Tennessee streets, Admission 10 cents.

An event of a lifetime is a visit to the Battle of Atlanta.

A BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

The New Denison Parlor Open to the Friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Martindale.

Indianapolis society has never had an oppor- tunity of witnessing so elegant a party as was given last night at the New Denison, by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Martindale. The spacious parlors were ablaze with electric lights, and flowers and plants in the greatest profusion, graced the mantels, fire places and tables, while the long halls were used for a promenade and the large dining-room was reserved for dancing, the music for which was furnished by Hart's orchestra. In the latter room were double rows of plants down the sides, and the mirrors reflected ferns and palms, as well as beautiful women in rich costumes and many gallant beaux.

The party was general, over four hundred invitations were issued, and the assem- bly included prominent families from this and surrounding cities. The old and the young hap- pily mingled in the pleasures of conversation or dancing. The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Martindale and their daughter, Mrs. Hervey Bates, Jr. Mrs. Martindale wore an elegant costume of black silk, on train, trimmed with Persian embroidery of light blue, gold and silver. Mrs. Bates wore a dainty short dress of black net embroidered in silver stripes and a corsage ornament, a spray of wheat of jet and silver. They were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin- dale, Mrs. George O. Taylor and their sons and daughters.

The breakfast-room and one of the parlors were used for the refreshment service. Here plants and flowers were the decorations and candles shed a mellow light. The costumes of the ladies excelled in beauty any ever seen at any similar entertainment. Mrs. Benj. Harrison wore a dress of saumon pink silk, on train, com- bined with maroon velvet, and white lace flounces formed the petticoat. Mrs. J. K. McKee wore a dress of dancing length, of white, plain and brocade silk, with a corsage of moire, trimmed with white dotted net. Many beautiful bridal dresses were worn by the young married ladies, and a more brilliant or more widely representa- tive gathering could not have been brought to- gether by a less popular host and hostess.

Among the guests were President-elect and Mrs. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Morse and guest, Mrs. Brown, Judge and Mrs. W. A. Woods, Mrs. Jason Carey, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Wasson, Dr. and Mrs. Allen, Judge D. P. Bal- win and wife, of Logansport; Hon. William Rudy Fortke and wife, Mrs. Buchanan, Col. J. F. A PROBABLE BALL MANAGER.

Jack Glascock Comes, on Invitation, to Talk

Over Affairs Concerning the Club.

The near approach of the annual meeting of the directors of the Indianapolis Base-ball Club is starting a good deal of gossip about how the club will be constituted next year. The talk was increased, yesterday, by Jack Glascock appearing at English's Hotel. As he lives some- thing like a thousand miles from here, it was generally understood that he had not come on a pleasure visit in the dead of winter. His friends believe that he has been invited here in order that he might be consulted about taking the place of manager of the team. "I do not know what I am here for," said he to a Journal reporter last night. "I was invited to come by Mr. Brush, but as yet I have not found out what for."

"Has Mr. Brush anything to say about managing the club next year?" he was asked.

"Not a word. I had a talk with him to-day, but it was on general matters pertaining to the club. He asked me about the Base-ball and several other gentlemen who, I understand, would like to be the manager."

"Would you like to have the position?"

"It would not be an easy place to fill. A club can't win unless you have men who will play ball. If a club loses right along a manager is blamed for it, when in reality he is not responsible at all. I believe, then, now that it is a good time to be in charge of the Indianapolis club. It cannot go much lower, and if it is strengthened and goes up a manager might gain a reputation for himself."

"Have you been invited to remain here until after the directors meet?"

"Yes, and I will stay, although I do not know why."

Speaking of the new League rules Glascock said he thought they would give satisfaction. The system of classifying salaries adopted would cause some discontent in the general world work well. "It will prevent men from drinking and sulking," said he. "A player cannot expect a better salary unless he improves his playing. For instance, if it is in the winter, and he is not in the club, he cannot leave that club and go to another and get a larger salary. If he does not play well where he is he may be put on a lower salary next year, and he will be com- pelled to take his medicine wherever he goes. President Young will have the fixing of the salary schedules, and there will likely be much opo- sition. Men so do not will be put in the second or third class who have been drawing salaries equal to what men of the first class will get. They will object, but the only relief we will have will be to get out of the business."

In conclusion, he said he thought Indianapolis would have a strong club the coming year. He had heard that Eddy had said he would never play in Indianapolis again, but he doubted the truthfulness of the report.
